Davis House is a partner at Anderson Crawley & Burke. He focuses his practice on civil litigation and construction law matters throughout Mississippi and Louisiana.

Davis routinely represents contractors, subcontractors, materials suppliers, and property owners in all aspects of construction-related matters. His experience includes defending construction defect claims, prosecuting and defending lien and payment actions, and advising construction professionals on contract formation and interpretation issues.

Davis also represents businesses and individuals in the defense of personal injury, premises liability, products liability, and automobile liability claims. He works closely with clients and insurance carriers to evaluate exposure early, develop practical litigation strategies, and pursue efficient resolutions whether that's through motion practice, negotiation, arbitration, or trial.
